African Economic History

was founded in 1974 at the University of Wisconsin, and has also been associated with the Harriet Tubman Institute at York University. AEH publishes scholarly essays in English and French on economic history of African societies from precolonial times to the present. It features research in a variety of fields and time periods, including studies on labor; slavery; trade and commercial networks; economic transformations; colonialism; migration; development policies; social and economic inequalities and poverty. The audience includes a range of scholars interested in the African present and past.

Ghana Studies, the official journal of the Ghana Studies Association, is an interdisciplinary forum for cutting edge original research on Ghana's culture, society, history, and environment. Articles appearing in Ghana Studies are peer reviewed by an editorial team based in North America and Ghana, as well as by outside reviewers from across the globe. Since its first issue in 1998, Ghana Studies has published innovative work by leading scholars in Ghana, the US, Canada, and Europe.
